Threats In, To, and Through the Arctic and North Atlantic

From the European High North, across the North Atlantic, and through North America, Canada and its allies are improving their ability to detect, deter, and defend against new and evolving threats in, to, and through these vast regions.

This in-depth workshop will examine these evolving maritime security threats with the aim of better understanding the underlying threat drivers, the priorities of the various actors, and opportunities for cooperation between Canada and its allies.

Participants will include academics, experts, and practitioners from across the circumpolar North.

Ottawa

The Arctic Ocean renders the circumpolar north a fundamentally maritime environment, bordered by the territories of the Arctic states. Defence here is not solely a matter of sea power; it necessarily spans aerospace, cyber, and other domains — requiring a genuinely pan-domain approach.

Historically, the North American Arctic was the shortest vector for intercontinental weapons during the Cold War. The European Arctic and the North Atlantic have likewise long been vital sea lines connecting the two continents in both peace and war. Today, rising adversary ambitions and the ability to project power globally are merging the strategic dynamics of the Arctic and the North Pacific.

Across these framings, the Arctic is a zone in which Allies must detect, deter, and defend against threats In, To, and Through the region. These threat dynamics are changing rapidly, driven by technological innovation, intensifying strategic competition, and the accelerating effects of climate change.

As the Royal Canadian Navy's Arctic & Northern Strategic Framework notes: "The Arctic physical and strategic environment is rapidly changing, raising the importance of the region for Canada's security and defence." The same is true for all Arctic Allies.

This one-day workshop convenes experts from Canada, the Kingdom of Denmark (Denmark, the Faroe Islands, and Greenland), Iceland, Norway, the United Kingdom, and the United States to examine and map threats In, To, and Through the Arctic maritime environment. Speakers will interrogate a specific aspect of these threats within their areas of expertise. Post-presentation discussions will be governed by the Chatham House Rule.

To guide discussion, consider questions such as:

- How can Allies improve their defence and security contributions to the Euro-Atlantic region in a meaningful and sustainable way?
- How do Allied roles, involvement, and influence vary across the Arctic and the North Atlantic?
- Ultimately, how can Allies better deter conflict and address threats in the Arctic within the context of strategic competition and climate change?

Jacob Isbosethsen, Head of the Greenland Representation in Washington D.C.

Jacob Isbosethsen is a Greenlandic diplomat and senior civil servant. On July 7 2025, Isbosethsen became the Head of Greenland's Representation in Washington, D.C. Prior to this, he served as Head of the Greenland Representation in Beijing for four years.

Isbosethsen has worked for the Government of Greenland for more than 15 years. He began his career in the Department of Fisheries, Hunting and Agriculture, where he contributed to policy development in one of Greenland's most significant export sectors.

From 2011 to 2013, Isbosethsen was posted to Brussels as Embassy Secretary at Greenland's Representation to the European Union, where he worked on Arctic cooperation and trade policy. Upon returning to Nuuk, he joined the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, first as a Special Consultant and later as Head of Division.

In 2018, Isbosethsen was appointed as the first Head of Greenland's Representation in Reykjavik, Iceland. His work focused on establishing the new representation and strengthening cooperation between Greenland and Iceland in fisheries, education, tourism, and energy.

From November 2021 to June 2025, he led Greenland's Representation in Beijing. His responsibilities included promoting trade, investment, and cultural relations between Greenland and China, particularly within the seafood and fisheries industries.

He holds a Master of Laws degree from Aarhus University in Denmark.

Nikolaj Harris, Ambassador of the Kingdom of Denmark, Embassy of Denmark in Canada

Ambassador Nikolaj Harris joined the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Denmark in 2001 after having worked for the Danish Institute for Human Rights from 2000-01 mainly in Bosnia-Herzegovina. He has broad headquarter experience, including as Head of Section in the Department for Southern Africa, Department for Russia and the Balkan Countries as well as in the Department for Security Policy.

Ambassador Harris has spent half of his career at Danish missions abroad; 2004-07 as Deputy Head of Mission in Lithuania and 2009-13 as Deputy Head of Mission in Turkey. In 2013 he was appointed Deputy Director for the Department for the Middle East and North Africa in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Copenhagen where he served – with a short break as Chargé d'affaires at the Danish Embassy in Cairo for 6 months in 2016 - until he was appointed Ambassador to Morocco and Mauritania in August 2018. In August 2021 he returned to Copenhagen and took up the position of Director for Consular Affairs and Crisis Management which he held until November 2024. December 2024 he was appointed Ambassador to Canada.

Ambassador Harris obtained a Master in Contemporary History and Political Science from the University of Copenhagen in 2000. He took selected modules of the Master in Public Governance programme at the Copenhagen Business School and Copenhagen University in 2014-15 and in 2022-23 he concluded the programme Leadership in Public Governance. He speaks English, German, French and Russian (basic level).

Ambassador Harris was born in June 1972, he is married and has three adult children.

Speakers

Dr. Kari Roberts joined the Policy Studies Department in 2009. She received her BA (Hons) and MA in Political Studies from the University of Manitoba and her PhD in Political Science from the University of Calgary in 2004. Dr. Roberts' research concerns Russian foreign policy toward the United States specifically and the West more broadly. She is specifically focused on the influences of structure and agency on foreign policy making in Russia, notably the powerful presidency and how this influences relations with the United States primarily, but also Russia's interests in the Arctic. Dr. Roberts teaches introductory courses in International Relations and Comparative Politics, as well as senior level courses in American Government and Politics, International Organizations and Foreign Policies of the Major Powers.

Dr. Paal Hilde is professor of war studies at the Institute for Defence Studies (IFS), which is part of the Norwegian Defence University College. He earned his DPhil in politics at the University of Oxford in 2003. Paal has previously worked on policy planning and NATO at the Norwegian Ministry of Defence and has led the secretariat for two government-appointed commissions. His main research interests include Norwegian security and defence, NATO and Arctic security. Paal is the inaugural Norway Chair at the Ted Stevens Center for Arctic Security Studies. His most recent publications on the Arctic are "The New U.S. Arctic Strategy Is Focused on the Wrong Country" in Foreign Policy (online), November 2024 (with Jo Inge Bekkevold) and "The High North and the Arctic", in Bjørn Erik Rasch et.al. (eds.), Oxford Handbook of Norwegian Politics, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2025, pp. 897-914 (with Sven Holtsmark).

Dr. Sergey Sukhankin is a senior fellow at the Jamestown Foundation and the Saratoga Foundation (both in Washington, DC) and a fellow at the North American and Arctic Defence and Security Network (NAADSN). He specializes on Russian Arctic, natural resources and the Sino-Russian relations in the Far East. Currently, he is writing a book titled "The Creeping Sinicization of Russia". He is teaching International Business at MacEwan School of Business and Economics at the University of Alberta.

Dr. Marc Lanteigne is a Professor of Political Science at UiT: The Arctic University of Norway, Tromsø, specialising in Chinese and East Asian politics and international relations, as well as Asia-Pacific security and cooperation. He also specialises in the politics and security of the Polar Regions, including Chinese and East Asian diplomacy in the Arctic and via the Antarctic Treaty System.

Dr Lanteigne has previously taught in Canada, China, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, and has researched throughout the Arctic region, as well as on Antarctica politics and legal issues in Argentina, Australia and NZ. He has written numerous articles on Chinese domestic and international politics, including regarding Polar diplomacy. He is an adjunct researcher at the Centre for Arctic Studies at the University of Iceland, Reykjavík, and a member of the board of the UK-based Polar Research and Policy Initiative (PRPI).

Cdr Caroline Hoefsmit, Royal Netherlands Navy, started her career with sea-going appointments, as bridge watch keeper and principal warfare officer, included cold weather amphibious exercises, NLD task group operations, West Indian Guard Ship patrols as well as participating in Operations Active Endeavour and Enduring Freedom.

In 2008, she started her overseas assignments by relocating to the United Kingdom, where she served as a Maritime Operations Officer at the Joint Electronic Warfare Core Staff. During her exchange with the Royal Navy, she played a pivotal role in training PWO students at the Maritime Warfare School at HMS Collingwood. Cdr Hoefsmit subsequently joined Allied Maritime Command, where she served as a Battle Watch Captain, supporting Standing NATO Maritime Forces deployed at sea. Later, she transitioned to the Intelligence Branch as Cell Chief for Operation Sea Guardian and currently manages the Climate Security and Arctic Security portfolios within the Emerging Threats Section.

Beyond her professional achievements, Cdr Hoefsmit is committed to personal growth, holding degrees in psychology and biology. A proud and dedicated mother to Jack and Charlie, she enjoys traveling and exploring the world with her growing sons. A terrible cook, but an enthusiastic spare-time biologist, she finds inspiration in natural world. Her career and personal life reflect a balance of dedication, curiosity, and a commitment to making a meaningful impact.

Major-General (MGen) McKenna joined the Canadian Armed Forces in 1994, initially as an Army Reservist, and then attended the Royal Military College of Canada receiving his degree in Chemical and Materials Engineering in 1999. He also holds a Master's degree in Defence Studies from the Royal Military College of Canada (2013).

MGen McKenna earned his RCAF Pilot wings in 2002 and served as a Rotary Wing Tactical Aviation and Special Operations Aviation pilot in the RCAF. He has commanded at the Flight, Squadron, Wing, and Task Force level and has served in a variety of command and staff positions including postings in CANSOFCOM units, RCAF HQ and in the Canadian Joint Operations Command HQ.

MGen McKenna deployed twice to Bosnia in 2003/04 as part of NATO's Stabilization Force, and twice to Afghanistan; with CANSOFCOM in 2005/06 and as Officer Commanding Chinook in 2010/11, flying in support of Canada's combat mission. In 2018/19, he deployed to Africa as the Commander of Canada's Air Task Force in Mali as part of the UN's Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali.

MGen McKenna commanded 450 Tactical Helicopter Squadron from 2014 to 2016 flying the CH147F Chinook and he commanded 1 Wing, the RCAF's Tactical Aviation Wing, from 2020 to 2021. From 2021 to 2024, he served as the RCAF's Director General of Air and Space Force Development, working to set the requirements and coordinate the acquisition for several key new RCAF capabilities such as the CC330 Husky MRTT, the P8A Poseidon, and the MQ9B RPAS.

MGen McKenna has over 2600 flying hours in both Special Operations and conventional rotary wing aircraft. He is a graduate of the Canadian Army Command and Staff College, the Joint Command and Staff Programme the National Security Programme, and he has earned US Army Senior Aviator Wings. MGen McKenna is an Officer of the Order of Military Merit and has been awarded the Meritorious Service Cross, and the Meritorious Service Medal. MGen McKenna was promoted to his current rank in 2024. He is married to a retired Canadian Army Health Services Officer, and they have two lovely young girls.

He holds a PhD from the University of Southern Denmark and has previously worked as editor-in-chief at an online magazine and as assistant lecturer at the University of Copenhagen. His main research interests include Greenlandic foreign policy, Arctic security and cooperation, and International Relations and EU-studies. Dr. Nielsen is a widely used expert and commentator on Greenlandic and Arctic Affairs.

Ranj Pillai was Premier of the Yukon from 2023 to 2025. He was first elected to the Yukon Legislative Assembly in 2016 and was appointed as Deputy Premier, Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources; Minister of Economic Development; and Minister responsible for the Yukon Development Corporation and Yukon Energy Corporation.

He was elected for a second term in April 2021 and served as the Minister of Economic Development; Minister of Tourism and Culture; and the Minister responsible for the Yukon Housing Corporation, Yukon Liquor Corporation and Yukon Lottery Commission. In addition to his duties as Premier, he currently serves as Minister of the Executive Council Office; Minister of Economic Development; and Minister responsible for Yukon Housing Corporation.

During his time in office, Pillai has worked hard to advance a strong and diverse Yukon economy. He has focused on building an ecosystem to support entrepreneurs across all sectors while supporting the Yukon's vibrant resource sector which includes three operating mines. Pillai was recognized for this work as the recipient of the North Startup Canada 2019 Regional Award for Entrepreneur Promotion.

Pillai is a trusted decision maker and tireless community advocate who has contributed to numerous Yukon businesses, governments, schools and not-for-profits. He also co-chaired the 2020 Energy and Mines Ministers' Conference (EMMC) alongside the Government of Canada's

Pj Akeeagok is a national Indigenous leader who recently completed his term as Premier of Nunavut, following two terms as President of the Qikiqtani Inuit Association. He is recognized across Canada for advancing nation building priorities through Indigenous led negotiations and stewardship. As Premier, he helped secure Nunavut's historic Devolution Agreement, transferring responsibility for lands and resources across 2 million square kilometres, the largest land transfer in Canadian history. He oversaw the renewal of the Nunavut Agreement Implementation Contract, securing $1.5 billion over 10 years to strengthen Inuit rights and governance. He was instrumental in establishing the Tallurutiup Imanga National Marine Conservation Area, protecting 108,000 square kilometres of Arctic waters through a landmark Inuit Impact and Benefit Agreement valued at $190 million. He also championed transformative infrastructure initiatives, including the Iqaluit Hydro Project, now recognized as a nation building priority within Canada's Major Projects list, and the Greys Bay Road and Port, a strategic Arctic security and economic corridor.

Pj shares this journey with his wife, Parniga, and their three smart, outdoorsy children — Jazmine, Ryan, and Jacob — whose connection to the land and community continues to inspire his leadership and vision for Canada's Arctic future.

Dr. Lawson W. Brigham is Distinguished Professor of Geography and Arctic Policy at the University of Alaska Fairbanks and Senior Fellow at the Institute of the North. He is currently a Commissioner on the Alaska Arctic Policy Commission and a member of the U.S. Delegation to the International Maritime Organization in London. During 2005-2009 he was chair of the Arctic Council's Arctic Marine Shipping Assessment and Vice Chair of the Council's working group on Protection of the Arctic Marine Environment. He was a career U.S. Coast Guard officer serving from 1970-95 and retiring with the rank of Captain. He commanded four Coast Guard cutters, including the icebreaker Polar Sea; he also served as Chief of Strategic Planning at Coast Guard Headquarters. He has participated in more than 15 Arctic and Antarctic expeditions, and during summer 1994 Polar Sea crossed the central Arctic Ocean for science with the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Louis S. St-Laurent.

Dr. Brigham has been a research fellow at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, a faculty member of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and the Naval Postgraduate School, and Alaska Office Director of the U.S. Arctic Research Commission. He is a graduate of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy (B.S.), a distinguished graduate of the U.S. Naval War College, and holds graduate degrees from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (M.S.) and the University of Cambridge (MPhil and Ph.D). His research interests have focused on the Russian maritime Arctic, marine transportation, Arctic futures, remote sensing of sea ice, and polar geopolitics. He was named the 2010 Distinguished Alumnus of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and in 2013 was selected a member of the Norwegian Scientific Academy for Polar Research.

Neil O'Rourke joined the Canadian Coast Guard in August 2009 and has held a number of increasingly senior leadership roles since that time.

In October 2012, Neil was appointed Director, Integrated Logistic Support. In this role, he was responsible for an array of technical and business services for the Integrated Technical Services. In June 2015, Neil was appointed as Senior Director, Safe Shipping and Economic Intelligence. During this time, he was responsible for the development of national strategies to sustain and transform the Canadian Coast Guard's marine navigation programs. Neil was the national lead for Arctic program policy, user fees, and the implementation of e-Navigation in Canadian waters. He also served as a councillor with the International Aids to Navigation and Lighthouse Authority (IALA) on behalf of Canada.

In October 2018, Neil became the first Assistant Commissioner, Arctic region. In this role, Neil was asked to lead the implementation of the new Arctic region, by enhancing program and service delivery in the North to better meet the needs of Inuit, First Nation and Metis. From June 2020, he led the transition of the operational responsibility to the Arctic region through the development of a unique internal model between regions. This new model for regional service delivery was the first time that a federal region was inclusive of Inuit Nunangat, and has better prepared the Coast Guard to meet the future demands for service in the Canadian Arctic. Neil represented Canada as the Chair of the Arctic Coast Guard Forum Experts committee from May 2021 to January 2023.

In January 2023, Neil transitioned to the role of Director General, Integrated Technical Services. In this role, Neil was functionally responsible for the lifecycle management of all Coast Guard assets nationally. This includes the acquisition (of non-ship assets), in-service management and disposal. He was responsible for providing functional direction to the regions and Fleet Marine Engineering teams to ensure a consistent, national approach to managing Canadian Coast Guard assets.

Neil currently occupies the role of Director General, Fleet and Maritime Services. In this role, Neil has functional responsibility for the Canadian Coast Guard's Fleet, operational planning, and maritime security capabilities.

Jeremy MacDonald came to the North in 2010 for a 3 year assignment with the 1st Canadian Rangers Headquarters. He fell in love and forgot to leave. Since then, he served in the CAF in a variety of roles: Operations Officer for Area Support Unit (North), Plans Cell (J5), Commanders EA and Operations Officer (J3) within Joint Task Force (North).

In 2023 he participated in the CAF response to the wildfires in the Territories (LENTUS) and following that season, deployed overseas on OP UNIFIER.

After 30 years in the CAF he retired in 2025 to move to DFO and Canadian Coast Guard as the Superintendent of Security for Arctic Region. The Department of Defence missed him so much, that they brought the entirety of the Coast Guard to the department to get him back in.

If you want to get him talking, ask about SCUBA Diving.

Capt William Woityra is the incoming US Coast Guard Attaché in Ottawa and 2025 Council on Foreign Relations International Affairs Fellow in Canada with the Canadian Global Affairs Institute. A career icebreaker sailor with the USCG, he was Executive Officer on USCGC Thunder Bay, Ice Operations Officer for the USCG International Ice Patrol, Commanding Officer of USCGC Neah Bay, Coast Guard Attaché to Malta, and Operations Officer on USCGC Healy during five Arctic research missions, including to the North Pole in 2015. Capt Woityra established icebreaking policy and priorities as Program Manager for Coast Guard icebreaking, commanded USCGC Polar Star as it set navigational records in the Arctic and Antarctic, and was Director for Oceania Policy at the US Indo-Pacific Command from 2022-24.
